Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Beauty of the King In Theology, which is, in one sense, the science of Religion, there are two elements, the finite and the infinite. We may therefore begin our studies of almost all the topics of religion from two points; we may commence with the finite and proceed upward to the infinite, or with the infinite and descend to the finite. Our conclusions will have a distinct character as the one or the other method is adopted. Truth consists in a due relation of the two factors, and a great many of the perplexities of Theology emerge where the finite and infinite elements cross each other, as in the doctrines of Regeneration, Inspiration and Providence. In these there is a human element and a divine, a finite side and an infinite, and the conflicting views arise from a different placing of these factors. The same is true with regard to the Life of Jesus. Here also there are two factors. We may study it exclusively from the human side, or from the divine, or with the two elements in their just relation. My object in the following pages is to view the Life of Jesus with this last principle as the governing idea. It is the error of some recent writers, as, for example, Renan, and the author of Ecce Homo, that they view the Life of Jesus exclusively from the human side.
